they are sent as candidate officers to various battalions. One of these battalions is in Mikhaylovgrad. Here the Sixth Cavalry Battalion is located. The Sixth Cavalry Battalion includes a cavalry squadron which consists of two platoons, the first combat platoon, and the second heavy machinegun platoon. The platoons consist of one officer, one non-commissioned officer, three candidate non-commissioned officers, as section commanders, and 12 troops. The first platoon is armed with three light Maksim machineguns, four submachine guns, two pistols, 12 carbines, and 17 swords. The platoon has an antitank solotur gun, attack and defense hand grenader and 17 horses. In case of an emergency this platoon can be transformed into an infantry platoon. One of the soldiers looks after the horses, while the others act as an infantry unit. The second heavy machine gun platoon consists of the same personnel as the first combat platoon. It has three heavy machine guns. The second motorized squadron of the sixth cavalry battalion includes two platoons, one shock platoon, and one heavy machine gun platoon. The composition of this squadron is similar to the composition of the shock cavalry squadron. The first platoon has three light machineguns, three or four submachine guns, two pistols, 12 carbines, 17 swords, and one reyno truck for transporting / personnel and equipment / in case of need. The weapons of the second platoon are similar to those of the first platoon except that instead of light machineguns it has three heavy machineguns.

5. The supply platoon is in charge of feeding the horses, the troops, supply of munitions, fodder, and clothing. Supply work is done by trudovaks and by several regular soldiers.
